

W. W. CHISHOLM.

What better legacy can man leave to posterity than the record of a life well-spent, of every duty fulfilled. If, from a higher destiny, we could look back and view the progress of our earthly life, what one of us would not like to see our name beloved and our memory blessed. It is too true that most great men are never fully appreciated until after death, but there are thousands and thousands to whom W. W. Chisholm was the personification of human charity and who blessed him through life as they now will bless his memory.

The sad news of Mr. Chisholm's death was received in Salt Lake last week from Los Angeles, where he had gone in an effort to restore his failing health. Besides his immediate family and many close world. His charities were generously and quietly distributed, while he avoided all publicity to the fact that he was the greatest giver in Salt Lake. Only those who knew him best realized what a rare Christian he really was. His memory will stand when we are all forgotten.

friends, the whole country mourns his loss, and any tribute, however expressed, would be inadequate in showing the esteem in which he was held.

Mr. Chisholm was born in Wisconsin, June 26, 1842, coming to Salt Lake and Utah in 1864. Since that time he has been prominently identified with the mining and commercial progress of the state. He was closely connected with the discovery and development of two of the greatest mines in Utah and the west. These were the old Emma mine, in the Little Cottonwood district, and the famous Centennial Eureka mine; in Tintic. Besides his Utah interests, Mr. Chisholm had extensive mining holdings throughout the west, and was also a factor in many commercial enterprises in this city. In 1900 he retired from active business, although he retained a greater part of his holdings.

Mr. Chisholm was as widely known as a philanthropist as he was in the business
